UCF police services help rape victims

You're on a date with a guy you've gone out with twice before. Your night is fairly routine. He picks you up from your apartment. The two of you have dinner before going to a club where you have a few beers. He takes you home, and then comes inside of your apartment to talk some more. You anticipate kissing him and the probability of telling him that you're not ready for a sexual relationship. What you didn't anticipate is his response. An hour after he leaves, you're still shaking, trying to sort out how something so awful as rape happened to you.

Reports from the Federal Bureau of Investigations indicates that this is a common scenario shared by 57 percent of 683,000 date rape victims who are females. The FBI also reports that one in 12 college men admit to forcing sexual intercourse on their partners. However, less than 5 percent of all rape cases are reported to the police. The victim's reluctance is linked to the stigma associated with rape and a self-deprecating belief that they are partly to blame.

Traditionally, police departments throughout the country have not lessened the trauma associated with reporting rape incidents. Because reporting rape is a sensitive and personal experience that can be as traumatic as the rape itself, the UCF Police Department established a Victim Services Program that, among other things, helps rape victims through the reporting process.

"The first thing we do is tell the victim that it is not their fault, that no one has the right to touch or do anything to you against your will. They didn't owe their dates anything just because the two of them went out and money was spent," said Mary Ann McCunn, Victim Services coordinator. "Then we encourage rape victims to undergo an examination and file a police report. We offer to escort them to the medical facility and to the police station. In addition, we can help with academic programs and refer them to other help agencies."

There has been few rape incidents reported at UCF. However, if the national trend is correct, there may exist victims the university can assist who have not sought help. To serve those individuals, Victim Services has begun an effort to post messages inside of male and female bathroom stalls about what to do after undergoing rape with the hopes that the person reading it will be persuaded to get help and seek counseling.

"That way a person reading the information can do so privately without anyone seeing. And if the information is right in front of them and so easily accessible, they will be more than apt to write down our instructions," McCunn said.

If you are raped, Victim Services encourages you to get help, contact the police, seek medical attention and contact their office or some sexual assault center in your area. However, you should not change clothes, take a shower or douche before undergoing a medical examination designed for rape victims. And just as important, you should not blame yourself, McCunn said.

"It is very important that rape victims get counseling. Mental care is

MEMORANDUM

To: All faculty

From: Roger Simmons, Library

Subject: Library research study rooms for faculty

One of the nicest features the Library offers each semester is the use of reserved study rooms for faculty members conducting research. Guidelines for the use of those rooms is as follows:

- Requests for the use of a study room should be submitted to Roger Simmons, Library, room 242. Rooms will be assigned provided there is adequate space to meet all requests.
- If requests exceed supply, assignments will be made by the Faculty Research Study Room Committee, which is comprised of representatives from the Faculty Senate and the United Faculty of Florida, and the head of the Library's Circulation Department.
- Keys will be issued to faculty at the Library Circulation/ Reserve Desk.
- Seven rooms are available on a semester basis. Three additional rooms will be available for short-term projects.
- Preference will be given to individual faculty members actively involved in research and writing projects in which use of Library resources is important. Assignments are not made en masse to departments or groups.
- The Library is a smoke-free building and smoking is prohibited in every area of the Library. Eating and drinking are permitted in the staff lounge only. Faculty are expected to abide by these policies. Access to the staff lounge is obtained from the circulation librarian. Disregard of these policies will result in revocation of room privileges and reassignment of the space.
- Library materials kept in a study room must first be checked out at the Circulation Desk. The Library staff retains the right to inspect a room at any time. Library materials not properly checked out will be returned to the shelves. Repeated offenses will result in termination of room privileges and reassignment of the room.
- An assessment of $5 will be charged if a room key is lost or not returned.

Searching for Lost Members

The UCF Circle of Omicron Delta Kappa is currently looking for lost faculty and staff members of our society. We are trying to update our files and would love to hear from you. If you are a member of Omicron Delta Kappa (this circle or another circle), give us a call at 823-2387.

September Open Enrollment USPS Sick Leave Pool Application

The USPS Sick Leave Pool will have an open enrollment period from Sept. 1 through Sept. 30.

To join the sick leave pool, you must have been employed continuously by the state for more than one year and must have a balance of at least 64 hours of unused sick leave. Part-time employees must have a proportionate amount based on their FTE. The donated hours will be deducted on the first pay period following the end of the open enrollment period. Return your completed application form to Human Resources no later than Sept. 30. If you have any questions, please call Deborah Evans, 823-2771.

From: Student Legal Services

Subject: Free services available to students

Student Legal Services would like to make you aware of the free services we have available to students with legal problems. If you should run across a student with legal questions concerning areas of law such as landlord/tenant, consumer, insurance, contracts, non-criminal traffic, name changes, wills and uncontested dissolution of marriage, feel free to send them to our office located in the Student Center, room 227 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. An appointment with our program attorney will be free of charge for consultation and representation. To qualify for our services, students must be currently enrolled at UCF. The office also offers the STARS program, which is a referral service to UCF graduates who are now practicing attorneys. This referral service is open to faculty, staff and students for a $20 consultation fee and is for areas of law that we do not handle. The office number is 823-2538.

Flint selected president at the UCF Foundation

Jonathan Flint, interim president of the University of Central Florida Foundation Inc. and former vice president and director of university development there, has been named president after a national search that drew 56 candidates.

Flint, 44, succeeds Dennis Eloie, who resigned the presidency of UCF's fund-raising arm in April to accept a position at a California university. As president, Flint is responsible for UCF fund-raising programs and administering Foundation assets exceeding $45 million.

Flint, who reports to President John Hitt and is answerable to a board of directors comprised of community leaders, joined the UCF Foundation staff in 1994 as vice president and director of university development after serving as vice president and chief operating officer at a Pennsylvania medical-based foundation.

Previously, he served as executive director of development at Ithaca College, Ithaca, N. Y., and held a variety of positions in the fund-raising and development field at the University of Pittsburgh.

"Jon brings impressive advancement experience and knowledge of fund-raising opportunities in mid-Florida to an assignment of critical importance to UCF," Hitt said. "Jon's performance during the few months he served as interim president foreshadows a future much richer in private giving and support of UCF programs."

Flint earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Pittsburgh and a master's degree from Duquesne University. Flint is in the dissertation phase of work toward a Ph.D. at the University of Pittsburgh.

If you talk to most of them, what you will find is they have drawn a line in their life separating their life before rape and afterwards."

Victim Services is not just for college students, but for those working on UCF's campus as well. In addition to assisting rape victims, the center offers support to anyone on campus who is a victim of crime.

The Verdict — A Mock Rape Trial

REACH: Peer Education

Mock trial will explore the issues of date rape

To address the issue of date rape, the UCF Rape Awareness and Prevention Network and REACH (Responsible Education and Action for Campus Health), Peer Education will sponsor "The Verdict," a mock rape trial in which the audience serves as the jury. The event will be at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 18, in the Student Center Auditorium and is open to the Central Florida community.

The roles of the victim and accused will be portrayed by student actors. The actors' portrayals will allow the audience to understand date rape from both the male and female perspectives.

The audience will be divided into several juries. The audience will be able to ask questions to determine if the accused is guilty or innocent. Each jury will reveal its verdict and then discuss its decision. Afterwards, jurors will view a skit depicting what took place on the night of the alleged rape. An open discussion about the issue of date rape will conclude this workshop.

For information, call 823-5841.

Students, Industry for the Poor help Haitians obtain clean water

An easy-to-use, affordable water purification system costing less than $3 a year per household to maintain is saving lives in Haiti, where human waste and other contaminating debris pollute the country's water supply.

Last month, 70 of such water purification systems were installed in homes in Campeche Dumay, a small village in Haiti. Results of the system's impact on the health of those in the village will be determined later.

The purification system was developed by Thomas "Phil" Warwick, director of the Industry for the Poor Inc., which works to improve the quality of life for those in poor areas, and was assembled by disabled adults in Brevard County. A team of environmental engineering students at the University of Central Florida helped to train Haitians to use the system and is researching it; so far, the students believe the system to be extremely effective.

The system that uses two buckets containing purification filters is as effective as more complex systems costing as much as $300. However, Warwick's invention is affordable to those living in the village, where the average household income is $30 to $40 per month. Its effectiveness and low cost would make the system ideal for use in other Third World countries with similar conditions.

Presently, everyone in Campeche Dumay is infected with heliobacter pylori, a bacteria that forms in latrines and travels underground, contaminating the country's drinking water supply. The bacteria enters the body mainly through drinking contaminated water.

The bacteria can cause stomach ulcers and severe diarrhea, which can lead to death. Contaminated water is the dominate factor in Campeche Dumay's 13 percent extra mortality rate. Eight-five percent of all illnesses in the country are related to the contaminated water supply. Haitian babies 3 months and under are affected the most. Parents commonly give 3-month-old babies contaminated water, supposedly to help them develop an immunity. Instead, many develop diarrhea and become dehydrated. Death can occur in as little as four days.

Warwick said that the Haitians are receptive to changes implemented by the Industry for the Poor and UCF students.

"Haitians see children as their only true possession," said Warwick. "The parents are willing to try nearly anything that will benefit them."

Warwick's water purification system consists of two large buckets containing purification filters. One bucket with a hole in the bottom fits on top of the other separating the two filters. Bleach is added to both buckets. Then, contaminated water is poured into the top bucket, where it is filtered and released into the second bucket. The water is drinkable in two hours.

"I thank God there are people who are willing to spend long hours in terrible conditions—phones not working, power outages—to help the world's poorest of the poor," said Geraldine Armand Blanchard, a Melbourne resident whose family emigrated from Haiti in 1965. "Wherever children see a puddle or even waste water running along the street, they cup their hands to take a drink. People are dying from this terrible tragedy."

The Industry for the Poor also educates Haitians on how to detect probable sources of contaminated water.

For more information, call Thomas "Phil" Warwick at 777-2179.

Police Department wins award for vehicle design

The UCF Police Department won third place in the 1996 International Police Vehicle Design Competition. More than 400 law enforcement agencies from around the world entered their vehicles in the eighth annual contest. UCF won in the federal or state agency category, one of seven categories. The department will receive a plaque for its award.

The competition was co-sponsored by Law & Order Magazine, the largest independent police publication, and 3M, a leading supplier of reflective and nonreflective pressure film used on vehicle fleets. Winners are showcased in the July issue of the magazine.

UCF has approximately 12 marked vehicles. The new design consists of black and gold stripes along the sides with the agency's name and the Pegasus on the front panel and "Police" printed across the back. 3M materials makes the design reflective, allowing for greater night visibility. The new design will be applied to all of the department's vehicles when possible. Graphic Imagination's Gary Sidders Jr. provided the design.

Judges evaluate the vehicle graphics based on the image they project, how the graphics enhance safety, how easily and quickly the vehicles can be identified and the practicality of the design.

An independent panel of law enforcement professionals served as judges, which included Neil Boot, executive director of training at the National Safety Council, a veteran officer of the Chicago Police Department, Sheriff Mearl Justus, St. Clair County, Ill. and Robert Veto, president of Veto Enterprises, Sycamore, Ill.

UCF Police Department

The UCF Public Safety and Police Department is dedicated to the commitment of public safety, crime prevention and security for the entire university community. The department's goal is to provide a safe environment where faculty, staff, students and visitors can work, study and visit together. The department is a full service law enforcement agency with arrest powers.

A copy of the brochure "Police Services and Safety Guide" is available at the UCF Police Department. It provides information on the department's services in accordance with the 1990 Federal Crime Awareness and Security Act.

UCF's Army cadets rank just behind West Point

UCF ranked second in the nation in the number of Army cadets selected for summer airborne training at Fort Benning, Ga. Twenty-six cadets from UCF's Army Reserve Officer Training Corps detachment participated in the Army Airborne School's three-week program that culminated in five parachute jumps for the qualifying future Army officers. The UCF contingent was larger than units representing any other institution, except for the United States Military Academy at West Point. Participants were selected primarily on the basis of competitive physical conditioning.

Jerry Richardson

Several hundred members of the UCF community, and family members and friends of Jerry Richardson attended a memorial service at the UCF Arena on Wednesday, Sept. 4.

The services honored Richardson's life and the many people he influenced.

President John Hitt said that Richardson "was a complete man — he did his job well and worked in his community. He tried to build, to give. He set a standard of excellence on and off the court. He will be hard to replace."

Richardson's contributions were lauded by colleagues and friends, who included Steve Sloan, director for UCF Athletics, Greg Hall, a faculty member representing the Black Faculty and Staff Assembly, Richard Lapchick, director for the Study of Sport in Society, Jean Flavelle, executive vice president for the Coalition for the Homeless, Mike Manglardi, president for Knight Boosters, Fred Applin, head basketball coach for Hampton University, and Lakesha Anderson, a representative from the UCF's women's basketball team.

Richardson was killed in a car accident on Aug. 30.

Richardson attended Northwestern State University on a track scholarship. There he earned his undergraduate degree in education in 1979. From there, he attended Louisiana Technological University, where he earned a master's degree in adaptive physical education. He served as head coach for the girls' high school varsity basketball team at the Navajo Reservation at Shiprock, N.M., from 1982-1993, building the group into a team of winners within eight seasons. His influence was so profound that it inspired a documentary based on his experience.

As the head coach for UCF's women's basketball, Richardson led the team to a 42-68 overall record in four years. Last season, he led the women's team to its first Trans America Athletic Conference tournament championship and won a berth at the NCAA tournament for the first time in school history.

In addition to his coaching duties, Richardson directed the Center for Study of Sport in Society, which has a regional office at UCF. Richardson also contributed his time to the Central Florida community in many ways, including serving as a member of the board of directors for the Coalition of the Homeless.

A memorial fund has been established in his name through the UCF Foundation.

Widening of Alafaya placed as planning priority with transportation board

Relief from traffic congestion on Alafaya is certainly in the future of drivers traveling north from the university. But when that relief will come remains in question.

Dan Holsenbeck, vice president for University Relations, has worked to convince leaders of the Orlando Urban Area Metropolitan Planning Organization that Alafaya Trail is one of the hot spots in the Central Florida area that needs widening despite all of the other congested locations in the region.

The MPO has placed the widening of Alafaya Trail from north of McCulloch Road to Mitchell Hammock Road on its priority list for the next construction period, which begins in 2002. The project would make the section of Alafaya Trail into a six-lane road using several funding sources. The estimated cost is $25 million.

But the MPO intends to approach Seminole County officials to ask them to start the widening of that portion as soon as possible. The widening of Alafaya just below that section was undertaken by Orange County with an agreement that the MPO would reimburse it for the costs. The MPO hopes that a similar arrangement can be made with Seminole County.

"Commissioner Bill Donegan, who serves on the MPO board, is very familiar with our traffic needs. His dedication and determination has brought that to the MPO's attention," Holsenbeck said. "Bill will work with Seminole County to launch the construction project in the near future with their dollars."

If that occurs, then traffic woes will diminish in that area over the next several years.

Holsenbeck was invited last month to address the MPO at a public hearing to give testimony about the problem and the projected growth of the university over the next several years. Joe Wallace, the executive director for the Central Florida Research Park, was also on hand to explain the importance of resolving the traffic congestion in attracting large research companies to the park.

The public hearing was a forum for influencing the spending priorities for regional transportation projects. Following the hearings, the MPO board will approve a list of projects for submission to the Florida Department of Transportation.

Other items on the proposed planning list were a bike path that will extend from the Naval Base to Alafaya Trail and a computerized signal project that would coordinate traffic signals for a better flow of traffic.

Commissioner Bill Donegan (left) and Harold Barley of the Orlando Urban Area Metropolitan Planning Organization listen to testimony at a recent hearing.

Appointments and Activities

Eileen Abel and Elizabeth Pomeroy, assistant professors for the School of Social Work, have been awarded the national Silberman Research Award. Their project evaluates the effectiveness of psychoeducational group intervention for women in a jail setting who are infected or affected with HIV/AIDS. Selection for the award is made on a competitive basis from among applicants who show promise of making significant contributions to social work knowledge and practice.

Debopam Chakrabarti, assistant professor for the Molecular Biology and Microbiology Department, presented three papers in Washington, D.C. and the United Kingdom on his research on malaria. He is an active participant in the international Malaria Genome Project.

Thomas Edwards III, professor for the Radiologic Sciences, has been serving on the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists Examination Committee for Quality Management for the past two years. He participated in the development and preparation of the Quality Management Certification Examination. This national exam will be administered for the first time in March. The content specifications are included in the curriculum of the UCF Radiologic Sciences program.

HOME PAGE DESIGN FOR THE INTERNET

Does your department need a home page? For just a modest fee, the Technical Writing program students are available for home page design services. To see an example of their work, refer to the English Department home page: <http://pegasus.cc.ucf.edu/~english>

Contact the English Department at 823-2212.

Or you can design your own home page with a little help from the publication "Using the Pegasus Mail Server," which students and staff can purchase at the Computer Store.

Got a new home page? The UCF Report will publish some of the new addresses.
